Common Native American Sun Symbol: This is one of the most common symbols among all Native American Indian tribes. You will note this particular sun design has seven rays. Each ray represents the seven energy centers within human beings, and also the development of each of these energy centers. This symbol identifies the healing arts, and represents a peace-loving person. It also signifies the transitional power behind an entity who is evolved enough to radiate internal light outward in the environment. (Source: http://www.whats-your-sign.com/sun-symbols.html)

In the self emergence of the cosmos very crucial is the role of the cosmic light.

Our reality is simply distorted, arid and limited in absence of light.

All our creative revelations has been through the cosmic light.

The end of the cosmos will be due to the end of light! O remover of darkness!

(Artist: Caspar David Friedrich Date: 1774-1840)

Only our inner eyes can see the greatness of light.

Only our inner eyes can see the beauty of the unsullied light.

Our way to divinity is the story of the journey of pure light.

With a loud thunder life emerged out of light.

Unseen and unperceived in the beginning was the pure light.

Nothing but pure potency is the pure light.

The end of the cosmos will be due to the end of light! O remover of darkness!

A miracle by itself is the cosmic light.

Life was born and conceived out of light.

Transformation from light to matter was the movement into second dimension by light.

Transformation from light to life was the movement into third dimension of light.

Through photosynthesis into plant transformed the light.

When light embodied itself as plants of the earth we could see the genius of light.

The end of the cosmos will be due to the end of light! O remover of darkness!

Transformation from light to life endowed with intelligence and creative ability was the movement into fourth dimension of light.

Self consciousness, reflection and creativity was brought about in the fourth dimension of light.

Philosophy, wisdom, knowledge, science, ethics and art are the various manifestations of the fourth dimension of life.

All our transcendent dimensions and attributes were born out of light.

We can read the cosmos in depth with the help of light.

New visions of the world we can get with the help of light.
