The Mound Builders believed that Red Horn was one of the five sons of Earthmaker whom the Creator formed with his own hands and sent to earth to rescue mankind. Red Horn was a great hero and led war parties against the enemies of the people and supernatural monsters and demons from the Underworld including the Great Serpent and the Horned Panther. Rings: Dream rings represent a promise or bond we have with our destiny, with another person, or with our community. This symbolic bond is incredibly strong and infinite. When we dream of a Ring slipping off our finger, we must rekindle the relationships we've let slip. When we dream of Rings that are stuck on our finger, we need to re-examine an unhealthy relationship. (Source: <http://www.warpaths2peacepipes.com>).

Horseshoe: Another ancient emblem used to ward off the "evil eye." Common legend is that the ends must be pointing up (keeping all the good luck in). There are theories that the magic of this symbol is in its shape - that of the horned moon. Then again, most are satisfied that the shoe protects the horse - must work for people too. Two arrows: Two arrows depicted together were the symbol for war. The choice of a Native American Indian to go to war was entirely voluntary. Public gestures were made to demonstrate an acceptance to go to war. Among the eastern tribes and Indian would strike the red-painted warpost, or, on the plains, by smoking from a ceremonial pipe. The term warpath referred to a route taken by a war party of American Indians going to a war. (Source: <http://www.warpaths2peacepipes.com>)
